PENN GRIDDERS MUST SHOW MORE FIGHT TO WIN REMAINING GAMES

Heisman's Squad Has Developed Power, and Material Is of Kind From Which Winning Teams Come. but More Punch Must Be Developed

By STONEY McLINN

THE life of the chap who pounds out football comment is by no means "one A sweet dream." Just as we were leaning back in an easy chair, plenty of eightestes at hand, and prepare g to learn how to watch football via that very interesting Percy Haughton book, along comes a letter from "Red and Rine" the gist of which was a query, "What about Penn and her tootball prospects?" It perhaps is appropriate that on the midday of the week, and at the mid-station of the season, space should be devoted to the past and future of the football team representing the great educational institution of which Philadelphinns all may be proud. But the deuce of it is that John W. Heisman's laddle-bucks have given as so little of what we may term "true hope" upon which to have an honest opinion us to the future of the team.

Transfer Athletes THE OBSERVER Stagg's Career

COLLEGE football players are not the hardened, grizzled veterans of the professional baseball world. They are boys, many of them still in thele teens, and as boys they are highly responsive to emotions, Criticism, sharp and repeated, cuts them to the heart, and praise, mushe and in abundance, goes to their heads.

Commendation and condemnation have the same effect upon some college boys. Too much of either ruins their fitness for football. We remember some years ago a Penn player who broke into a regular position as a sophomore and played such a bang-up game he was featured daily in the head ines of the newspapers. He played splendid and spectacular footbell in every game that year. The following fall, he was counted upon as a regular, but training season was not over before the coaches discovered that he was not the man he was toe Egotism crowded and overwhelmed his better self. He was a hero and didn't have to train. He was a star and didn't have to listen to the adrice On his reputation he was started in the first game and was a flat failure.

His love of stage play was evident to the spectators and the press. He wanted to lick the reporters after he had rend their criticisms, and he wanted to take a punch at the coach when he was kept ou the sidelines at the beginning of the second game. But the season wore on and the swell-headed player wore out the bench

He brooded and sulked. He became heart-broken finally and when his spirit was gone he was willing to listen to advice.

He began to train hard, "the "old fight" came back, and the coaches noticed improvement. He didn't start in the Cornell game, but he was sent in the second peried. He was a wolf. He crushed the Ithacan line on the attack and his tackling was so vicious that he turned back every rush that came into bit

TIMES is only one case where newspapers praised and spotled an athlete. A Many coaches wisely request newspapers to refrain from lauding too highly certain members of their squads.

Another Move Against "The Drifter" THE movement of Yale, Harvard and Princton against the "tramp athlete," so called because of affiliations, at different times, of course, with various colleges, is gaining headway.

At a recent meeting of the Intercollegiate A. A. A., governing track and field sports in the East, the opening wedge was made in a campaign for publicity regarding the personnel of all collegiate athletic activities. The innovation will be tried in connection with the freshman cross-country hampionship and will involve a complete disclosure of the entrants' previous cholastic and collegiate athletic activities. It was also intimated that this system will be later adopted for all I. C. A. A. A. A. dual meets and championships. It was said further that the thought ould be suggested to similar sport-governing bodies.

While this listing of sport records would not bar "the drifter," yet it would afford an opportunity to detect any irregularities in the statements furnished by the proposed contestants at the time they entered college. The clamp is becoming tighter and tighter on the transfer athlete and the day is not far distant when more rules will be made against him. No TRANSFER athlete entering Yale, Harvard or Princeton after the first of the new year will be permitted to participate in inter-
